Enhancing Teaching Practicum Experiences: A Sharing of School Internship Insights

Introduction:

Teaching practicum experiences hold a pivotal role in the training and development of future educators. This report captures the reflections and insights shared by ten F.Y.B.Ed. students - Pallavi Karnik, Manisha Hasewad, Harsha Bhong, Pratiksha Patni, Dilip Chavan, Shweta Kakade, Sapna Dongare, Gauri Raundale, Siddhi Jagtap, and Prayag Jamale. These students engaged in a collaborative activity where they recounted their school internship experiences, focusing on teaching methodologies, learning evaluation, and co-curricular activities they encountered during their role as teachers. The activity was conducted after their four weeks internship on 19th July 2023 in their internship group of the faculty in-charge Dr. Suresh G. Isave.

Procedure:

The activity was conducted as a structured sharing session where each participant had the opportunity to narrate their experiences. The students discussed various aspects of their internships, including:

1. Teaching Strategies and Methodologies: Participants highlighted innovative teaching techniques they utilized, such as experiential learning, collaborative group activities, and technology integration. They discussed how these approaches engaged students and facilitated a deeper understanding of subjects.

2. Learning Evaluation Practices: The students shared their methods for assessing student progress and understanding. Formative assessment tools like quizzes, group discussions, and peer assessments were emphasized for their effectiveness in gauging comprehension and adapting teaching strategies.

3. Co-curricular Activities: The interns described their involvement in co-curricular activities like sports meets, cultural events, and field trips. They highlighted the holistic development of students through these activities and the role of teachers in fostering a well-rounded educational experience.

Key Insights:

The sharing session yielded several significant insights:

1. Adaptability and Flexibility: Interns realized the importance of being adaptable in the dynamic classroom environment. They learned to modify lesson plans on-the-go based on student responses and needs.

2. Student-Centric Approach: Many students emphasized the shift from a teacher-centered to a student-centered approach. They recognized the significance of tailoring teaching methods to suit individual learning styles.

3. Assessment for Learning: The participants acknowledged the value of formative assessment as a tool not only for grading but also for guiding instructional decisions. This approach enabled timely interventions to support struggling students.

4. Holistic Education: Engaging in co-curricular activities showed the interns how these pursuits contribute to the overall development of students, fostering skills beyond academics.

Implications:

The insights shared by these F.Y.B.Ed. students carry implications for teacher training and pedagogical practices:

1. Experiential Learning: Teacher education programs should incorporate more experiential learning opportunities to prepare future educators for real-world classroom challenges.

2. Assessment Training: Training should emphasize diverse assessment methods, helping teachers effectively gauge student progress and adapt instruction accordingly.

3. Holistic Development: Encouraging the integration of co-curricular activities into lesson plans can contribute to a more comprehensive educational experience.

Conclusion:

The collaborative sharing session among F.Y.B.Ed. students provided a platform to reflect on their school internship experiences. This exercise not only helped them consolidate their learnings but also shed light on effective teaching practices, assessment strategies, and the role of co-curricular activities in shaping holistic learners. The insights gathered from this activity can inform the refinement of teacher training programs and inspire innovative approaches to classroom instruction.
