MAKING TEACHER EDUCATION RELEVANT FOR 21ST CENTURY AFRICA THE OPEN UNIVERSITY AND TESSA

100%
AVERAGE TEST
SCORE

The publication of the UNESCO ICT competency framework for teachers, and a drive across Africa to improve internet connectivity, alongside a focus on 'learner-centred' approaches means that considerable changes are needed in schools and teacher education institutions; and that teacher education has taken on a new significance. This course is for anyone who is working with teachers – teacher educators, education officers, headteachers, and teachers supporting each other.

STUDY REQUIREMENT

4 weeks, 4 hours per week

LEARNING OUTCOMES

- Develop a plan to incorporate ICT tools and OER into your own practice to support the learning of the teachers and student teachers you are working with
- Explain how ICT tools can be used to enhance teacher learning and promote active learning in school
- Engage with the TESSA OER and identify ways in which they can be integrated into your teaching
- Collect specific examples to show how ICT can be integrated into classroom teaching to enhance learning
- Explore and evaluate OER repositories that are relevant to your practice and support active teaching and learning
- Collaborate with colleagues in order to review practice in your institution
- Explain and demonstrate the values and practices that support learner-centred education

SYLLABUS

- Examine what is meant by 'learner-centred education';
- Focus on the 'how' of active teaching and learning and learner-centred education;
- Introduce the UNESCO ICT Competency framework for teachers, and exploring the role of teacher educators in supporting teachers to enact these practices;
- Provide examples of classroom practice which draws on ICT to support learning;
- Introduce OER in general and, TESSA in particular, as a way of supporting their own work and the work of pre-service and in-service teachers in developing active approaches to teaching and learning.
